

In the Specification

On page 3 exactly before the paragraph reading “Names used in examples herein are intended to be fictional” and after the several paragraphs inserted per earlier amendments please insert the following paragraph.

A “visual display unit” displays images generated from the output of devices such as computers. Contemporary examples of a “visual display unit” are thin film transistor liquid crystal screens, cathode ray tube monitors, electronic paper, organic light emitting diode display screens, and the like.